Senate amendments to the bill to enourage cooperative marketing, now in onference to smooth differences between the two branches of Congress, were condemned by Mr. Howard and by Gray Silver, another official of the Farm Sureau, as "utterly destructive of the censits sought by the legislation." The icnate amendments took the administration of the measure from the Department of Agriculture and transferred it to the rederal Trade Commission and specificially emphasized that its provisions were not to be construed as exempting monopolies from the Clayton anti-trust act.

The farmers' spokesman asserted that the difference between these two governmental agencies, both of which they conceded were exercising entirely proper and desirable functions, were comparable to the difference between a detective force and a welfare organization. One was looking for crime while the other was seeking to prevent it, and the farmers, fearing presecution, preferred to be assisted in avoiding violation of law rather than to be indicted after they had unknowingly committed.

This view of the situation seemed to

This view of the situation seemed to impress favorably the committee, while several Senators expressed a desire to eliminate the Senate amendments.

It developed that Gov. Harding of the Federal Reserve Board has informed the Banking and Currency Committee of his opposition to the Hitchcock bill to use $70,000,000 Government profits from operating Federal Reserve banks as a fund to rediscount agricultural paper. At the same time Gov. Harding indorsed the proposal to use this fund to finance farm land banks, to which directors of the Farm Loan Board are opposed.

The prospective one year emergency tariff bill now threatened with a Democratic fillbuster in the Senate, was brought into the discussion. Mr. Howard was not enthusiastic over it, but said it might help.

"Our one claim," he said, "is that we should receive the same degree of tariff protection that is given to other products."
